Notes on Thanksgiving

In December 1620, the first Pilgrims landed and built their settlement in the middle of the homeland of the Wampanoag people in what is now Plymouth Massachusetts. Several years earlier, a plague brought by Europeans had killed the inhabitants of the village. The Pilgrims most likely would not have survived without the help of Tisquantum, or Squanto (1580-1622). Squanto knew English and had already been back and forth across the ocean to England three times (most often as a captured slave).

The Pilgrim's Thanksgiving feast in 1621 occurred sometime between September 21 and November 1. It lasted three days, and included fifty surviving Pilgrims and approximately ninety Wampanoag Indians, including Chief Massasoit. Their menu differed from modern Thanksgiving dinners and included berries, shellfish, boiled pumpkin, and deer. Now a Thanksgiving feast staple, cranberries were actually used by Native Americans to treat arrow wounds and to dye clothes.

Considered the "Mother of Thanksgiving", Sara Hale (1788-1879) was an influential editor and writer who urged President Lincoln to proclaim a national day of Thanksgiving. She selected the last Thursday in November because, as she said, harvests were done, elections were over, and summer travelers were home. She also believed a national Thanksgiving holiday would unite Americans in the midst of dramatic social and industrial change and "awaken in Americans' hearts the love of home and country, of thankfulness to God, and peace between brethren."

We have so much to be thankful for here at The Masonic Home of Virginia.

Lisa Scottoline

Lisa graduated magna cum laude with a BA in English in 3 years from the University of Pennsylvania in 1976. In 1981 she graduated cum laude from the U of PA law school. She began her law career as a clerk for a judge and then joined a law firm in Philadelphia. She left the law firm in 1986 to raise a newborn daughter and began writing fiction to support herself.

Scottoline's first novel was published in 1994 and became a best seller. Her second novel won an "Edgar". She continues to win awards and all 32 of her novels have been on "best seller" lists.

She does lots of research for her writing and works a full day, everyday; she likes to write 2000 words a day. She doesn't work from an outline, she just wants to tell a terrific story. She has co-written several books with her daughter, Francesca. She says her ideas come from her heart and life.

Scottoline loves dogs, cats, and horses and lives on a farm outside of Philadelphia. She also has chickens that I assume are not pets.

Corrupted begins with a highly respected Philadelphia lawyer going into jail to interview a young man who has been charged with murder. He claims he is innocent and has been framed.

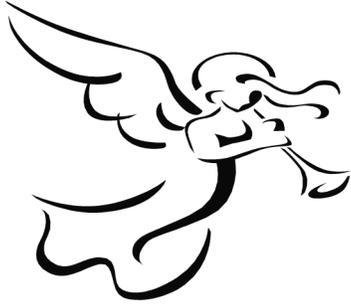

The lawyer, Bennie Rosato, has represented the young man before. Bennie is a woman, almost six feet tall, and works for her own law firm. Thirteen years prior, the young man and the victim he is accused of murdering had both been arrested for fighting in the middle school cafeteria. Bennie meets and falls in love with the other boy's uncle. Bennie had discovered some irregularities in the earlier case, but after disagreements with the boy's father over her relationship with the other boy's uncle, had been fired as his attorney.

Bennie takes the case partly from guilt because she wasn't able to free him from the penal system when he was 12. You'll need to read the book to see how it turns out. It is interesting to read if you're a fan of Pennsylvania law and court procedures. Unlike many crime novels, Corrupted has a gentle love story entwined. The story is based on an actual event in which two judges were sent to prison.

There are several Scottoline novels, both regular and large print, in the MAHOVA library, and others may be downloaded if you have a Henrico County Public Library card. Or you can order them to be delivered by the Mobile Library if you'd rather. The Mobile Library is at MAHOVA from 1pm to 2pm once a month. If you have an Henrico Public Library card you can call 804 501 1953 and order books, movies, magazines and audiobooks and pick them up on the next visit. Or, if you have a computer you can download lots of e-books.
